AIM OF THE GATHERING (JALSA)

“The major aim of the gathering is that the sincere members of the Jamaat should be able to derive religious benefits and at the same time they should acquire more knowledge and advance in their God realisation. One advantage is that meeting with friends will broaden their circle of brotherhood and it will strengthen their circle of brotherhood and it will strengthen the mutual ties.”

The Promised Messiah, Asmani Faisla

“You should listen with most attention and concentration, because this is an affair concerning your faith. Negligence, indifference if shown in this matter would bring forth adverse effects. Those who show indifference and apathy in matters concerning faith, whenever something is said to them, never pay attention to it. However effective, beneficial eloquent may be the speech it would have no effect on such people. These are the people for whom it is said that they possess ears, but they don't hear, and they possess a heart but don't understand. It is, therefore, essential that you should listen carefully to what is said. Any person who does not listen carefully, however long he may enjoy the company of a beneficial person he would never benefit from him.”

*The Promised Messiah,
Al-Hakam March 10, 1902*

10.DELHI – AN INTRODUCTION:

Delhi : A Transition through Time - As you walk along the narrow bylanes of this city of dreams, tread softly. Every crumbling wall has a story to tell. Every yesterday is replete with history. Rulers have come and gone. The city has lived through wars and resurrection, repeatedly rising from the ashes.

Cradling civilisations since times immemorial Delhi goes back hundreds of thousands of years back into time

The first city of Delhi, Lal Kot was founded by the Tomar ruler Anangpal, in the 11th century. Qutbuddin Aibak became Delhi's first Sultan in 1206 and laid the foundations of the Qutb Minar, India's tallest stone tower at the site of the first city of Delhi subsequently the kings of the Sultanate dynasties, Khaljis, Tughluqs Sayyids and Lodis continued to build. New cities as Delhi grew.

The second city around Siri by Alaud-Din Khalji (1296-1316); Tughlaqabad, the third city built by Ghiyus-Din Tughluq (1321-51); Firuzabad, the fifth city of Delhi, is now represented by Kotla Firuz Shah, founded by Firuz Shah Tughluq (1351-88). It was Humayun who laid the foundations of the sixth city - Dinpanah. This was destroyed and reconstructed as the Purana Qila by Sher Shah Suri however, it was the Mughals who took Delhi to the zenith of architectural glory.

While some construction activities did continue during the reign of Akbar (1556-1605) and Jehangir (1605-27), it was Shah Jehan (1628-58) who built the seventh city, Shahjahanabad which remained the Mughal capital until 1857. The British in 1911 shifted the capital of India to Delhi. The eighth city of New Delhi took shape in the imperial style of architecture. From then to now Delhi continues to throb with vitality and hope. The ruins and ramparts still stand tall in dignity - and amidst them rise modern buildings and giant skyscrapers. It's a breathtaking synthesis of yesterday and tomorrow, the holding on to the past and surging ahead to the future.

Delhi Importance in view of Jama'at

In 1884, Hazrat Ahmad (SA) married to the daughter of Nawab Nasir of Delhi at Baradari Masjid.

The Delhi Debate in October 1891 took place between Hadhrat Ahmad (as) and Maulvi Muhammad Bashir Bhopali on Death of Jesus Christ (as) he had died a natural death.

Mirza Bashiruddin Mahmood Ahmad 2nd successor to the Promised Messiah in a public gathering in Delhi in 1944, claiming himself to be the "Musleh Maoud" and reiterating his challenge about the interpretation of the truths and wisdom of the Qur'an.

Publication of "Al Haque" started from Delhi in year 1914

Hazrat Chaudhry Sir Muhammad Zafrullah Khan In March 1915, lectured before the Jama'at in Delhi on the topic "The need for religion".
